PSALM CII.

Almighty Father, hear my prayer, let my voice ascend to thee In this dark hour of grief and sare, Hide not, oh God! thy face from me!

My heart is withered, like the gross That autuma winds have whistled by; My days, like fleeting vapor, pass, And sorrow husbes bunger's pry.

As on the waste, the boding owl A wakes the night with mouruful tone; Bol in darkness raise my soul, And watch-and feel I am alove!

Tears, litter tears, are in my cup, And face around me seeff and from n; For thou, oh Lord! who raised me up, Art angry now, and cast'st me down My days were like the hues that shine

Or evening clouds in golden light;
Ah, like those hees my hopes decline, And leave me wrapt in deepest night But they forever shalt enders ; To latest time thy memory last;
The woulds of Zion thou wilt cure-

Yes, now her they of suffering's past. Thy servants love her very dust-And stones en I dust along remain But Lord! in thee we place our trust, That thou witt build her walls again

Thy voice of love will not be mute, When prayers from humble hearts ascend : Then wilt regard the destitute, Time orphan's sire, the mourner's friend.

This precious truth shall meet the eyes Of a dathess millions vet to be: And from their lips shall praise urise, Like sweetest incense, up to thee !

OUR MAYING.

BY MISS MITFORD.

As party produces party, and festival brings forth festival in higher life, so one scene of rural festivity is pretty sure to be followed by another. The boy's cricket match at Whitsuntide, which was won most triumphantly by our parish, and luckily passed off without giving one for a coroner's inquest, or indeed without ajury of any sort, except the demolition of Amos new straw hat, the crown of which (Amoe's head being fortunately at a distance,) fairly struck out by the cricket-ball; this atch produced one between our eleven and the players of the neighbouring hamlet of Whitley; and being patrenised by the young lord of the er and several of the gentry round, and lowed by jumping in sanks, riding denkey-rathe graning through horse-collars, and other more renowned for their entiquity an their elegance, gave such general satisfaction, that it was resolved to hold a Maying in full form in Whitley-wood. Now this wood of our's happens to be a comase of twenty acres, with three trees on it, and the Maying was fixed to be held between baytime and harcost; but "what's in a name Whitley-wood is a beautiful piece of green sward, surrounded on three sides by fields and farm-houses, and cottages and woody uplands, and on the other by a fine park; and the May bons was creeted and the May-games held in the beginning of July; the very season of leaves poses, when the days are at the longest, and the weather at the finest, and the whole weeld is longing to get out of doors. Moregver, the whole festival was aided, not impeded, by the gentlemen amateurs, headed by that very genial person, our young lord of the manor; whilst the se part of the affair was confided to the well known diligence, real, activity, and intelligence of that most popular of village landlords e host of the Rose. How could a Maying fail under such auspices? Every body expected more sunshine and more fun, more flowers and more laughing, than was ever known at a rustic merry-making -and really, considering the manper in which expectation had been raised, the matity of disappointment has been astonish-

Landlord Brown, the master of the revels, Your very good neighbor, is a portly, bustling man, of five-and forty, or thereabouts, with e, jovial, visage, a merry eye, and a pleasant le, and a general air of good-followship. revers, who generally account him a sort of der Boniface, and imagine that, like that owned hero of the spiggot, Master Brown, drinks, and sleeps on his own anno domini. hey were never more mistaken in their lives; no soberer a man than Master Brown within swenty miles! Except for the good of the house, he no more thinks of drinking beer, than a groeer of eating figs. To be sure when the jug example, and to set the good ale a going. But, in general, he trusts to subtles and more delicate modes of quickening its circulation. A good song, a good story, a morry jest, a bearty laugh, most winning habit of amentation; these are his implements. There is not a better companion, of a more judicious listener in the county. His pliability is astonishing. He shall say yes to twenty different opinions on the same sub jest, within the hour; and so honest and cordial cas his agreement seem, that no one of his customers, whether drunk or sober, ever dreams of deabting his sincerity. The hottest conflict of politics never pumled him: Whig or Tory, he was oth, or either-" the happy Mercutio, that curses both houses." Add to this gift of conformity, a cheerful ever temper, an alacrity of attention, a sealous desire to please, which gives to his duties, as a finidlerd, all the grace of even when he has nothing to gain by them; and one one can wonder at Master Brown's popular-

After his good wife's death, this popularity began to extend itself in a remarkable manner amongst the females of the neighbourhood; smit- park, and that Sam (he's a sad pickle is Sam!) fairly set affont—an honest English country ten with his portly person, his smooth, oily manner, and a certain, soft, earnest, whispering voice, which he generally assumes when addressing one of the fairer sex, and which seems to make his very " how d'ye do" confidential and complimentary. It was thought that the good landlord was well to do in the world, and though Betssy and Letty were good little girls, quick, civil, and active, yet poor things, what could such young girls know of a house like the Rose? All would go to rack and ruin without the eye of a mistress? Master Brown must look out for a wife. So thought the whole female world. and apparently, Master Brown began to think The first fair one to whom his attention was directed, was a rosy pretty widow, a pastrycook of the next town, who arrived in our village on a visit to her cousin, the baker, for the purpose of giving confectionary lessons to his wife. Nothing was ever so hot as that courtship. During the week that the lady of piecrust staid, her lover almost lived in the oven. One would have thought that he was learning to make the cream-tarts without pepper, by which Bedreddin Hassan regained his state and his princess. It would be a most suitable match, as all the parish agreed; the widow, for as pretty as she was, and one shan't often see a pleasanter, open countenance, or a sweeter smile, being within ten years as old as her suitor, and having had two husbands already. A most proper and suitable match, said every body; and when our landlord carried her back to B. in his new-painted green cart, all the village agreed that they were gone to be married, and the ringers were just setting up a peal, when Master Brown returned alone, single, crest fallen, dejected; the bells stopped of themselves, and we heard no more of the pretty pastry-cook. For three months after that rebuff, mine host, albeit not addicted to aversions, testified an equal dislike to women and bracelets, widows and plum cake. Even poor Alice Taylor, whose travelling basket of lolly-pops and gingerbread he had whilome patronized, was forbidden the house; and not a bun or a biscuit could be had at the Rose, for love or money.

The fit, bowever, wore off in time; and he began again to follow the advices of his neighbours, and to look out for a wife, up street and own; whilst at each extremity a fair object presented herself, from neither of whom had he the slightest reason to dread a repetition of the repulse which he had experienced from the blooming widow. The down-street lady was a widow also, the portly, comely relict of our drunken village blacksmith, who, in spite of her joy at her first husband's death, and an old spite at mine host of the Rose, to whose good ale and good company she was wont to ascribe most of the observations of the deceased, began to find her shop, her journeymen, and her eight belp-mate to ease her of her cares, collect the boys at night, see the girls to school of a morning, break the large imps of running away to rever and fairs, and the smaller fry of birds'nesting and orchard-robbing, and bear a part in the lectures and chastisements, which she deemed necessary to preserve the young rebels from the bad end which she predicted to them twenty times a day. Master Brown was the coadjutor on whom she had inwardly pitched; and, accordingly, she threw out broad hints to that effect, every time she encountered him, which, in the course of her search for boys and girls, who were sure to be missing at school time and bed time, happened pretty often; and Mr. Brown was far too gallant and too much in the habit of assenting to listen unmoved; for really the widow was a fine, tall, comely woman; and the whispers and smiles, and hand-pressings, when they happened to meet, were becoming very tender; and his admonitions and head-shakings, addressed to the young crew (who, nevertheless, all liked him) quite fatherly. This was his downstreet flame.

The rival lady was Miss Lydia Day, the carcenter's sister, a slim, upright maiden, not remarkable for beauty, and not quite so young as she had been, who, on inheriting a small annuity from the mistress with whom she had spent the best of her days, retired to her native village to live on her means. A genteel, demure. quiet personage was Miss Lydia Day; much addicted to snuff and green tea, and not averse from a little gentle scandal-for the rest, a good sort of a woman, and un tres-bon parti for Master Brown, who seemed to consider it a profitable speculation, and made love to her whenever she happened to come into his head. which, it must be confessed, was hardly so often as her merits and her annuity deserved. Loveless as he was, he had no lack of encouragement to complain of-for she "to hear would seriously incline," and put on her best silk, and best simper, and lighted up her faded complexion into something approaching to a blush, whenever he came to visit her. And this was Brown's up-street love.

So stood affairs at the Rose when the day of the Maying arrived; and the double flirtation, however dexterously managed, must have been, sometimes, one would think, rather inconvenient to the enamorato, proved on this occasion extremely useful. Both the fair ladies contributed her aid to the festival; Miss Lydia by tying up sentimental garlands for the May-house, and scolding the carpenters into diligence in the erection of the booths; the widow by giving her whole bery of boys and girls a holiday, and turning them loose on the neighbourhood to col- Sam, who had gotten into a demele with a hospitality, and a perpetual civility and kindness, lect flowers as they could. narrowly escaped a horse-whipping from the head gardener at the hall, who detected a bonnet of his new rhododendron, the only plant in the county, forming the very crown and centre of the May-pole. Little harm did they do, poor children, with all their pilfery; and when they returned, covered with their flowery loads, like the May-day figure called "Jack of the Green," they worked at the garlands and the May-houses as none but children ever do work putting all their young life and their untiring spirit of noise and motion into their pleasant labour. Oh, the din of that building! Talk of the Tower of Babel! that was a quiet piece of masonry compared to the May-house of Whitely-wood, with its walls of leaves and flowers-and its capvass booths at either end for refreshments and musicians. Never was known more joyous note of prepara-

The morning rose more quietly-I had almost said more dully-and promised ill for the fete. The sky was gloomy, the wind cold, and the green filled as slowly as a balloon seeins to do when one is watching it. The entertainments of the day were to begin with a cricket-match. (two elevens to be chosen on the ground.) and the wickers pitched at twelve o'clock procisely. Twelve o'clock came, but no crickets-except indeed, some two or three punctual and impatient gentlemen; one o'clock came, and brought no other reinforcement than two or three more of our young Etonians and Wyckhamites-less punctual than their precursors, but not a whit less impatient. Very provoking, certainly, but not very uncommon. Your country cricketer. the peasant, the mere rustic, does love, on these occasions to keep their betters waiting, to show his power; and whon we consider that is the one solitary opportunity in which importance can be felt and vanity gratified, we must acknowledge it to be perfectly in human nature that a few airs should be shown. Accordingly, our best players held aloof. Tom Copes would not come to the ground; Joel Brown came, indeed, but would not play; Samuel Long coquettedhe would and he would not. Very provoking, certainly! Then two young farmers, a tall brother and a short, Hampshire men, cricketers born, whose good-humour and love of the game rendered them sure cards, had been compelled to go on business-the one, ten miles south-the other, fifteen north-that very morning. No playing without the Goddards! No sign of either of them on the B -- road or the F-Most intolerably provoking, beyond a doubt Master Brown tried his best coaxing and his best double on the recusant players; but all in vain. In short, there was great danger of the match going off altogether; when, about two o'clock; Amos Stokes, who was there with the crown of his straw hat sewed in wrong side outwardnew thatched, as it were-and who had been set to watch the B- highway, gave notice children (six unruly obstreperous pickles of boys, that something was coming as tall as the Mayand two tomboys of girls,) rather more than a pole-which something turning out to be the ong Goddard and his brother approachin the same moment in the opposite direction. hope, gaity, and good humour revived again; and two elevens, including Amos and another urchin of his calibre, were formed on the spot. I never saw a prettier match. The gentlemen, the Goddards, and the boys being equally divided, the strength and luck of the parties were so well balanced, that it produced quite a neckand-neck race, won only by two notches. Amos was completely the hero of the day, standing out half of his side, and getting five notches a one hit. His side lost-but so many of his opponents gave him their ribbons (have I not said that Master Brown bestowed a set of ribbons?) that the straw hat was quite covered with purple trophies; and Amos, stalking about the ground, with a sly and awkward vanity, looked with his decorations like the sole conquerorthe Alexander or Napoleon of the day. The boy did not speak a word; but every now and then he displayed a set of huge white teeth in a grin of inexpressible delight. By far the happiest and proudest personage of that Maying was Amos Stokes. By the time the cricket-match was over, the world began to be gay at Whitley-wood. Carts and gigs, and horses and carriages, and people of all sorts, arrived from all quarters; and lastly, the "blessed sun himself" made his appearance, adding a triple lustre to the scene. Fiddlers, ballad-singers, cake-baskets-Punch-Master Frost, crying cherries-a Frenchman with dancing dogs-a Bavarian woman selling broomshalf-a-dozen stalls with fruit and frippery-and twenty noisy games of quoits, and bowls, and ninepins-boys throwing at boxes-girls playing at ball-gave to the assemblage the bustle clatter, and gaiety of a Dutch fair, as one sees it in Teniers' pictures. Plenty of drinking and smoking on the green-plenty of eating in the booths: gentlemen cricketers, at one end, dining off a round of beef, which made the table totter -the players, at the other, supping off a gammon of bacon-Amos Stokes crammed at both-and Landlord Brown passing and bustling every where with an activity that seemed to confer upon him the gift of ubiquity, assisted by the little light-footed maidens, his daughters, all smiles and curtsies, and by a pretty black-eyed young woman-name unknown-with whom, even in the midst of his hurry, he found time, as it seemed to me, for a little philandering. What would the widow and Miss Lydin have said? But they remained in happy ignorance—the one drinking tes in most decorous primness in a distant marquee, disliking to mingle with so mixed an assembly,-the other in full chase after the most unlucky of all her urchine, the boy called showman, in consequence of mimicking the hibition into disrepute. Meanwhile, the band struck up in the Mayhouse, and the dance, after a little demur, was wooden gentleman Punch, and his wife Judy-

thus, as the showman observed, bringing his ex-

dance, - (there had been some danger of waltz- | son has put, " which of the three kingdoms ing and quadrilling) -with ladies and gentlemen at the top, and country lads and lasses at the bottom, a pleasant mixture of cordial kindness on the one hand, and pleased respect on the other. It was droll though to see the beplumed and beflowered French hats, the silks and the furbelows sailing and rustling amidst the straw bonnets and cotton gowns of the humbler dancers; and not less so to catch a glimpse of the little lame clerk, shabbier than ever, peeping the rose for its splendour, and a third the through the canvass opening of the booth, with s grin of ineffable delight over the shoulder of our vicar's pretty wife. Really, considering that gether at that moment at the top of the set, so deeply engaged in making love that they forgot where they ought to begin, and that the little elerk must have seen them, I cannot help taking his grin for a favourable omen to those faithful lovers.

Well, the dance finished, the sun went down, nd we departed. The Maying is over, the booths carried away, and the May-house denolished. Every thing has fallen into its old position, except the love affairs of Landlord Brown The pretty lass with the black eyes, who first made her appearance at Whitely-wood, is actnally staying at the Rose Inn, on a visit to his daughters; and the village talk goes that she is o be the mistress of that thriving hostelry, and the wife of its master; and both her rivals are jealous, after their several fashions-the widow in the tantrums, the maiden in the dumps. Nobody knows exactly who the black-eyed damsel may be, -but she's young, and pretty, and civil, and modest; and, without intending to depreciate the merits of either of her competitors, I cannot help thinking that our good neighbour has shown his taste.

FEMALE BEAUTY. It has been said by some one, and if not aid, it shall be said now, that no woman is neapable of inspiring love, fixing affection. and making a man happy. We are far less nfluenced by outward loveliness than we magine. Men speak with admiration and write with rapture of the beauty which the artist loves, which, like genius in the system of Gall, is ascertained by scale and compass: but in practice, see how they despise hose splendid theories, and yield to a sense of heauty and loveliness, of which the standard is in their own hearts. It is not the legance of form, for that is often imperfect; is not in loveliness of face, for there nature has been perchance neglectful; nor is in the charm of sentiment or sweet words al lack of that; neither is it in the depth of their feelings, nor in the sincerity of their affection, that their whole power over man r not, has that power more or less; and every man yields to its influence.

The women of all nations are beautiful Female beauty, in the limited sense of the word, is that outward form and proportion thich corresponds with the theories of poets and the rules of artists-of which every nation has examples, and of which every woman has a share. But beauty, by a more natural definition of the word, is that indecribable charm, that union of many qualiies of person, and mind, and heart, which nsures to man the greatest portion of happiness. One of our best poets has touched on this matter with the wisdom of inspiration: these are his words: She dwelt among the netrodden ways Beside the springs of Dove, A maid whom there were none to praise, A maid whom there were none to praise

And very few to love.
She lived upknown, and few could know
When Lucy crased to be:
But she is in her grave, and, oh!

There was a maiden something more to the purpose than the slender damsels whom academies create on canvas, or of whom some bachelor bards dream. The poet of Rydal Mount is a married man, and knows rom what sources domestic happiness comes. The gossamer creations of the fancy, were they transformed to breathing flesh and blood, would never do for a man's bosom. Those delicate aerial visions, those personified zephyrs, are decidedly unfit for he maternal wear and tear of the world .-Not so the buxom dames of our two fine islands. Look to them as they move along. If art with its scale and its compasses, and its eternal chant of "the beau ideal-the beau ideal," had peopled the world, we would have been a nation of ninnies, our isles would have been filled with gay figures and beings "beautiful exceedingly, loveless, joyless, splendidly silly, and elegantly contemptible. It has been better ordered . .

I have looked much on man, and more or roman. The world presents a distinct image of my own perception of beauty; and from the decisions of true love I could lay down the law of human affection, and the universal opinion entertained respecting fe-male loveliness. There is no need to be profound, there is no occasion for research; look on wedded society, it is visible to all. There, a man very plain is linked to a womair very lovely; a creature silent as marble, to one eloquent, fluent, and talkative; a very tall man to a very little woman; a very portly lady to a man short, slender, and attenuated; the brown weds the black, and the white the golden; personal deformities are not in the way of affection; love contradicts all our theories of loveliness, and happiness has no more to do with beauty than a good crop of corn has with the personal looks of him who sowed the seed. The question, therefore, which some simple per-

has the most beautiful ladies!" is one of surpassing absurdity. Who would ever think of going forth with rules of artists in their hands, and scraps of idle verse on their lips, to measure and adjust the precedence of beauty among the three nations? Who shall say which is the fairest flower of the field, which is the brightest of the stars of heaven One loves the daisy for its modesty, another lily for its purity; and they are all right.

theory of female leveliness, which of the ha-Susan Green and Jem Tanner were standing to- tions has the most beautiful women, because we know not which of them is the happiest. Wherever there is most bosom tranquillity. most domestic happiness, there beauty reigns in all its strength. Look at that mud lovel on one of the wild hills of Ireland: smoke is streaming from door and window: a woman, to six healthy children and a happy husband, is portioning out a simple and scanty meal; she is a good mother and an affectionate wife; and though tinged with smoke and touched by care, she is warmly beloved; she is lovely in her husband's eyes. and is therefore beautiful. Go into von Scottish cottage: there is a clean floor, a bright fire, merry children, a thrifty wife, and a husband who is nursing the youngest child and making a whistle for the eldest The woman is lovely and beautiful, and in image of thrill and good housewifery, bevond any painter's creation; her husband believes her beautiful too, and whilst making the little instrument of melody to please his child, he thinks of the rivals from whom he won her, and how fair she is compared to all her early companions. Or here is a house at hand, hemmed round with fruit trees and flowers, while the blossoming tassels of honeysuckle perfume us as we pass in at the door. Enter and behold that Englishwoman, out of keeping with all the rules of academic beauty, full and ample in her person, her cheeks glowing with health, her eyes shining with quiet happiness, her children swarming like summer bees, her house shining like a new clock, and her movements as regular as one of Murrat's chronometers. There sits her husband, a sleek contented man, well fed, clean lodged, and softly handled, who glories in the good looks and sagacity of his wife, and eyes her affectionately as he holds the shining tankard to his lips, and swallows slowly, and with pro-tracted delight, the healthy beverage which she has brewed. Now, that is a beautiful woman; and why is she beautiful? She is beautiful, because the gentle for even among women there is an occasion, ture and the kindliness of her heart throw a halo around her person, adorning her as a honeysuckle adorns an ordinary tree, and impressing her mental image on our mind

THE BURIAL GROUND OF VERA CRUZ. Of all the dreadful receptacles for the dead Lewis, or Mrs. Racliffe, I do not think any one could be found to equal this. I term it a " burial ground" out of courtesy, and in order to convey an idea of the use to which it is appropriated but, certainly, if by burial we are to understand the interment of a body, this disgusting portion of mother earth can by no means be honored by such an appellation. To say that it is literally a Golgotha, will barely convey a fraction of the horrors which abound there: the earth, the trees, the ledges of ruinous walls and sandy banks, all have their share. But I must bring the scene before your eyes by degrees, lest you should all at once find yourself plunged into some department of the infernal regions, and look round your study with eyes of transforming terror, till the had of every book begins to change to a grinning mask or a death's head.

... I had received intimation from several quarter already, that the burial ground of Vera Cru worth seeing, and accordingly "one fine sun-shiny morning," as we say in England, (with a feeling of gratitude seldom experienced in these regions,) I set out alone for the place, not wishing any uncongeniality of companionship to interfere with my first impressions. I walked about a quarter of a mile out of the tewn before reached it; perhaps the distance is not so much but I lost my way as usual; and I de not re-member ever feeling the heat less oppretaire, being so much occupied, I suppose, with the coming scene as to exclude haif my-physical sensations by an inattention to their opera-

Before me stood the ruins of an old church of chapel, which had been shamefully ill-treated by the mortars from the Castle of St. Juan, which, from the exposed situation and trifling distance, had soon stoned it down, and peppered it after it was down, one would imagine from the quantity of shot lying about in all directions, as though the devil's marble-bag had been emptied over it. I never witnessed such an instance of practical argument. The Veracrozanos had andeavoured to fortify it, I was afterwards informed, by sand-banks, and so forth; they had also conveyed several pieces of cannon there, which no doubt they had played off to some purpose against the Castle. This, of course, was what drew down upon the church so tremendous a fire. This demolition seemed to have taken place some time since, as the weeds and moss had overgrown most of the fallen heaps, and the walls from whence hope masses had been separated, did not appear to have received their wounds very recently. There was a number of rude steme tombs and stony mounds of graves, scarce distinguishable from rubbish, surrounding the dilapidated remains of the church; these, bering over walls and brambles, gained the out-eking, and walking round, arrived at the en-trance of the burial ground.

Ominous enough it was. A long straggling wall, of the colour of pestilence, if one may so

It was now the commencement of the sickly seaton. Behold how much excellent advice was thrown away upon me; for certainly I may reckon this risit among the foremost of all my imprudent actions. But my hungering after wonders and adventures almost dispelled every fear of consequences, and quite obliterated from my memory all Dr. James Johnson has said in his excellent work on the "Influence of Tropical Climates on European Constitutions," which you were kind enough to send me previous to my departure. It seem ike the high road to Hades; and some minutes like the high road to Hades; and some minutes elapsed ere I felt thoroughly disposed to proceed. A few paces further, however, brought me more immediately into the scene; for on the right hand side, piled up in the angle of a decayed and crumbling wall, lay a tremendous heap of bare and grinning skulls! They were not arranged in any express form, but had evi-dently been cast there for the purpose of clearing away a fittle, just as we see rubbish heaped up in a corner. I shuddered involuntarily, and for a moment felt myself fascinated, as it were, and rivetted to the spot by its apparent consciousness, both of itself and of its apparent consciousness, both of itself and of my presence. I could not help looking behind at it as I walked away.

I now advanced farther into this desolate plan-

I now advanced farther into this desorate plantation; and entered a harrow pathrbetween some trees, over which the unhealthy and discoloused leaves seemed to have been sparely sprinkled by handfuls. I had not proceeded above a down paces ore I was arrosted by a fresh object of the paces of torror. A human hand, covered with a part and livid shin, rose up out of the sarth, to the centre of my path! In walking towar I had taken it for some dry root, and my su I had taken it for some dry root, and my suddeperception of the reality made it doubty startling. The path, if path it might be termed, was very narrow, and my first impulse, as the shortest way to avoid this threatening apparition, was by jump over it; but the attempt made he shudder (of course being attended with the expectation that it would seize me by the leg—a fancy which looks very ridiculous in the ords;) squeezing my self therefore among the boughs, I passed by a hastily as possible. Before, however, I has penetrated to the middle of the plantation, I descried, through an opening to the left, some penetrated to the middle of the plantation, scried, through an opening to the left, as thing of a more appalling fature than as the foregoing, and my curiosity, or rathe love of excitement, caused me to make tow is without delay. FIGHT BETWEEN ROCERS AND BAILEY. -A pugilistic contest for 25t. a-side, between these two heroes of fistic notoriety, took place at Newport, on Monday last. Rogers, known in the ring as the Hereford Chickon, had already distinguished himself, but the odds were in favour of Bailey two to one. The men fought thirty-two rounds with mutual advantage: but in the last set-to Baily gave Rogers a tremendous fall, which rendered him deaf to 'time.' The battle lasted forty-eight minutes. Her longevity is more evident from th skin than any thing else I could perceive, hav-ing an appearance different from any thing I ever saw before. All her senses are still perfeet, except her eyes, and she still has the use o them in some degree, although cataracts are forming. She is always gay and cheerful, sleep-ing very little, and singing in the night from want of thought."

While the Earl of Wilton was engaged in the chase with his usual ardour on Thursday last, he met with an accident which might have terminated fatally. In riding a strange horse, (the huntsman's) at a post-and-rail fence, the animal once refused the leap, but took it the recond time, and in an ineffectual attempt to clear it, threw a complete somerset, and fell, with the Lordship's ribs were broken. THEATRICALS.-We understand that the father of Miss Phillips, whose very successful debut at Drury Lane we had occasion to notice some time ago, is an engineer and surveyor in Oxford street. The young lady is not a pupil, as has been stated by some of our contemporaries, of Mrs. St. Leger: she is under the care of Mrs. Kearnes, to whom she has been articled for five years. Mrs. Kearnes receives the half f Miss Phillips's salary, and, in return, we believe, finds her in board and dresses, besides giving her instructions.

Loss OF THE FACTOR, WITH HER CAPTAIN ND THE WHOLE OF THE CREW .- Whitehaven, Dec. 16 .- The Factor, Connell, and Express, traders, sailed from this port for Belfast and London on the 9th inst. The Express put back the next day, but the Factor unfortunately remained at sea, in the hope of making her passage, and the consequence has been the total wreck of that fine vessel, and the melancholy oss of her captain and the whole of the crew consisting of 14 persons. The vessel, it is sun goed, had struck near the Ross at the entrance of Kirkcudbright. The body of the captain was ound upon the rocks, nearly opposite the Ross, without shoes, coat, or waistcoat; and from its spearance, it is inferred that he had swum from the vessel and reached the shore alive, but had afterwards perished through the inclemency of the weather. The boat was found on the beach at no great distance, and several firkins of buter and other articles, known to have been on board, were cast on shore. No part of the wreck has yet made its appearance, nor any of the other bodies found. It is conjectured there were some passengers on board. A tar, who had been boasting of the numerous foreign places he had seen, was asked if he had ver seen Louisiana. "No," says Jack; "wha

"Resurrectionists" were defeated, and compelled to restire, giving, however, in their retreat, their antagonists to understand they would take measures that their triumph should be of but temporary duration.

About two o'clock in the morning they returned to the acene of action, several of whom were provided with fire-arms; others came prepared with pick-axes, and other instruments of their unhallowed trade, as these offensive weapons. Those whom they thus came to attack had employed their time in increasing their force, by the addition of both men and arms; they now stood in regular array in the church-yard. There was no time spent in parley. A volley of bullets, slugs, and swan drops, from the Resarrectionists commenced the engagement. This was promptly answered by a similar discharge from the other side, while those who were not armed with guns rushed on each other with such weapdischarge from the other side, while those who were no armed with guns rushed on each other with such weap ons as they possessed. The consequences that might be expected were soon felt. One of the defending party, man named Ward, received a ball in one of his arms and while in the act of attempting to discharge a pistulia return, the barrel, from being overcharged, burst and shattered his right hand in a dreadful manner; others on the same side also felt the effects of their adversaries

the same side also felt the effects of their adversaries' shot; while at the same time more than one of the invaders of the sanctuary of the tomb were observed to fall, and a few to withdraw themselves altogether, evidently disabled from taking any further part in the combat.

After the contest had been supported for some time, the wretches, who had originally been the cause of this bloodshed, began to give way, and were soon after entirely driven from the premises, when they retreated towards town, bearing with them their wounded companions. The field of setion, on the following morning, exhibited abundant proof of the fury and deadly animusty with which hostilities had been carried on. Since the occurrence, a strong party of the William's town Police, under Peace Officer M Dowell, continues to patrol nightly near the Church yard.

The temperature which ranged from the 20th ult. from 15 to 18 Reaumur du ring the day, has fallen 4 or 5 degrees within he last 3 days. The effect which this change atmosphere will have on the disease is no yet known; but judging from the previous years of 1804, 13 and 14, the yellow fever will diminish considerably the ensuing week; and it is the by the 15th to the 20th of this month. Ther are at present very few sick in the city; but the disease has extended to Europa Point and Windmill Hill, the most salubrious parts of the Rock. The 94th regiment and 23d artillery, encamped at Europa Point, on a plain where the wind always blows with violence, are diaily losing men; the 43d, 93d, and 12th, encamped on the Neutral Ground, where the epidemic has never penetrated in former seasons, are daily sending ick to the hospitals. The French physicians Charion, Trousseau and Louis, who are prose-cuting their labours with indefatigable courage, have hitherto escaped; but on Friday, 28th ult. a young English physician, Dr. Brown, assistant surgeon of the 23d, who arrived about the same time as our fellow-countrymen, and who bestowed the most assiduous attentions, both in the hopitals and barracks, was violently attacked, and it was not until to-day that hopes were entertained for his life. The Colonel of the artillery regiment died to-day.

The Journal du Commerce, of the 25th, says There is nothing new relative to our affairs with Algiers. The Dey refuses all negotiation with the French officers attached to the blockading squadron. He pretends that his honor would b ompromised, and does not wish to have the appearance of capitulating, and says he will not recognize any negotiators who are not strangers to the blockade.

"The Algerines are divided into two factions one of which desire peace, and the other war.-The latter is the most powerful, and has obtained the command of the fleet, which, notwithstanding the vigilance of the French cruisers, is increased, from time to time, by some light vessels, obtained from Italian speculators. It is not believed, however, that this fleet will be able to get out. At all events, our sailors are anxious to fall in with them."

BARCELONA, Dec. 12 .- The corn markets at Seville, Santander, and the other ports on the north of this Peninsula, have been very active. Superior quality hard corn has been sold at Soville for 40 reals vellon, the fanega, delivered on board. The same price has been paid at Santander: good soft corn has brought 42 reals vollon, the fanega. The greatest part of these purchases were made for English and French accounts.

hould be prohibited from making contracts for the transportation of the Mail on Sunday; to do this of his own accord, was what could not be expected of any officer. The matter was too such as no individual ought to be required to take upon himself. If the prohibition took place at all, it ought to be made under the sanction of whother they would print any extra number of on which he should ever stand, in every thing

Mr. MARVIN was opposed to the adoption of

It rarely happened, and he hoped it would con-

As it would not be in order to discuss the merits of the report on a motion to print, Mr. M. should, at that time, give no opinion as to the policy proposed by the report, nor upon the epinions it advanced, or the reasoning by which those opinions were sought to

Mr. WEEMs would prefer having the report of the Senate printed in connexion with that of upon the former, pronouncing it as his opinion, that a more correct view of the subject could not be given by the pen of man; and he wished it to go to his own respective constituents, that it might operate to put down all intermeddling the report made to the Senate respecting the proposition to stop the transportation of with the consciences of others, and thus preven men from erecting to themselves an image o idolatry, or imagining, as some men appear to do, that they would go to Heaven in the United States' Mail. Mr. W. said that he heard a voice sary; as every man in the Union, who read on his right suggesting to him that such persons would not travel on Sunday, even to get there; at all, had probably read this report in the but this he could hardly believe, as he rathe thought they would be willing to travel on any report would be read with interest and day of the week rather than not get there.

At this point of the debate, the hour elapsed which is devoted to reports and resolutions: pleasure, by many in his district who did whereupon, the subject was laid over until tomorrow morning.

> One of our late LONDON papers devotes wo columns to set forth the utility of a newvinvented filter for cisterns. To prove that such an article is highly necessary, the writer has been at the pains of collecting a mass of testimony in relation to the quality of the THAMES water. We take a short extract, for the benefit of the admirers of Loxoox porter. We pass over the evidence of he medical men, which is somewhat too strong for our columns, and give that of the engineer and the fishermen.

> Mr. Mills, the engineer, tells us, that the Thames is neither more nor less than the comnon sewer of London, so far as it receives the contents of all the sewers; which on the north side are ninety-nine, and on the south forty-six. The water taken up opposite some of the sewer at the time of discharge is nearly the substan ive contents of those channels. Mr. Joseph Evans has often seen the sewers discharging black slimy liquid, with gas, oil, dead animals. entrails from the slaughter-house, and othe filth too disgusting to name. Mr. Goodhugh, the fish monger, says, that the company's water is muddy and offensive: if fresh fish are put into it they will not live more than six hours, and turn a yellow colour. Mr. Butcher, a fish-salesman, states the water to be very bad, and that he has known three parts of a cargo of eels to die by the gas-water passing the vessel. Mr. Newland, the master of a Dutch vessel, says, that out of 26,000lbs. of eels, the cargo of two boats, only 9,000lbs, were marketed alive: they became sick on being put into Thames water and soon died; they changed colour, and be-came spotted like snakes. Another captain says, he has known 3,000 weight to die is half an hour, and if the water gets worse, they must give up the business.

Wm. and Thomas Hetherill, fishermen, state that they had left off the business because it has left them off. They used to catch flounders, cels, roach, smelt, salmon, &c. before they were ruined. The water gets worse ever year; the cause is the gas: they could get plenty of dead flounders, but no live ones; had seen the flounders put up their heads above the water, and if there was a bundle of weeds they would escape from the water upon it. Had seen two thousand the wells were opened there was quite a stench, and oil on the top of the water.

The last evidence we shall quote from is that of Mr. Goldham, who had been veoman at Billingsgate market for twenty-five years. He says he has known fifty thousand metts brought daily to Billingsgate, and three thousand salmon caught in the season in the Thames. He adds, that they are now all destroyed, and this fishery gone; and this he attributes to the impure state espect to the gentleman from Pennsylvania. He f the water, from the refuse of the gas-works, from all the common sewers running into it, and the steam boats constantly stirring up the filth. He has seen four thousand eels alive at night i ful. The misrepresentation into which the gentleman had fallen, (for he still thought it such,) had the Dutch boats, and the next morning threefourths have been dead. Many fishermen have been ruined by the change.

Such is the picture—the faithful and frightful picture—of the condition of the water of the Thames, as supplied by the corapanies to their customers. That the inhabitants of the richest, largest, most populous city in the world-the seat of a more opulent body of nobility and gentry than is to be found in any other metropolis should, for so long a time, have been content ed to have seen daily running into their cisterns, and to have used, for all domestic and culinary purposes, a necessary of life, so loaded with all rts of impurities as to be pronounced, by professional men of the first eminence, to be sive to the sight, disgusting to the imagination. and destructive to the health, is a fact that would not have been credited, and that ought not to have been credited, but upon evidence up answerable.

According to some of the Parts newspahe resolution, but not for the reason suggested ers, the French beggars seem to have beby his colleague [Mr. TAYLOR,] over the way come almost intolerable. The Constitutionnel says, "there is not a spot which is cument. The objection urged by his colleague would apply to the extra copies of almost every exempt from this scourge, not a commune, however small, where beneficence is not turned from its legitimate course by the sotinue rarely to happen, that a document, of licitations of passengers, always impostors, and sometimes insolent; not a fair, not a market, or rural meeting, which is not surrounded, as it were, and its approaches obstructed by bands of these vagabonds." The turned to us in the newspapers from remote sections of the country. But this, Mr. M. was no journalist does not hesitate to attribute the evil to the want of a system of elementary instruction appropriate to the habits and wants of the working population. A Lowevents as essentially to enter into the history of pox editor refers it to the miserable system our country, and were deserving to be published of agriculture in FRANCE, and quotes the following passage from one of the most distinguished FRENCH writers on this subject. Take the country thirteen leagues' from Paris, proceeding southwards, and you will find this detestable agriculture prevailing, with a few exceptions, all the way into Languedoc. There is not, in fact, an acre of artificial grasses from Chailly, thirteen leagues from Paris, to Riom, in Auvergne. The whole of this immense space is under the fallow system; almost every where the soil yields only rye one year, and lies absolutely idle the following. The Lemagne of Auvergue, the Promised Land of France, constitutes the only exception to this practice, which, however, is in full vigour in the mountainous parts which surround this beautiful valley; it recommences where the valley ends, and goes on to Languedoe. Upper Auvergne, the Gevaudan, Upper Rouerge, the Limousin, la Marche, Perigord, l'Angoumois, the mountains of Dauphine, Provence and the Cevennes, know no other cropping; the Morvan, the Gatenais, Upper Burgundy, a part of Lorraine, Champagne, the Nevernais, the Bourbanais, almost all Poitou, Brittany, the Upper Maine, Upper Anjou, le Perche, and Upper Touraine are, like the provinces above mentioned, under the disastrous law of absolute fallows and rye crops, the habitual harvest of all these countries. One half of France remains uncultivated each year, and the half which is cultivated is generally wretchedly cultivated for want of outlay and manuring. * * * There is no comparison between England and France in this respect, and still less with respect to another branch of the utmost consequence—cattle. There are more animals on one acre in England than on four in France, while the English cattle are greatly superior in quathird time to-day.

The Heir at Law, with the ballet of The Six Innocents and the musical farce of The Prize, drew a fashionable and pretty numerous audience, last evening. The comedy was very respectably performed. PLACIDE's Zekiel Homespun did him great credit, and I do not recollect ever being as much pleased with the honest young rustic. He stood up like a man efence, and deserved approbation which this scene received. He is, however, wanting in pathos, a gift absolutely requisite in such characters. Ropents played Pangless better than on a former evening, and showed that, with a little more animation, he could fill the part. Though improvement was perceptible, still the learned Doctor was drowsy n some of the best scenes, and particularly throughout the first act. Dick, by Wood, was as well acted as such a part deserves to be; for what is it, at best, but filthy dowlass? I need not say it is not one of his best things, but I have never seen it as well done by any one else. The dress he puts on, when he finds that his father has been made a pear, must be one of his own invention. If so, I wish him joy of his taste. KILNER's Duberly was both diverting and correct. The vulgarity that belongs to the part he exhibited with great effect, but avoided the extravagance he has sometimes indulged in. -TUTHILL has a good brogue, and was a faithful representative of the affectionate old Irish domestic. My Lady Duberly was better performed by Mrs. STICKNEY than almost any character she has yet appeared in. Her success she may attribute to her moderation, in not attempting, as she does too often, to take the audience by storm. I take credit to myself for the reformation, and hope she will not relapse. The lady does not want talent, though she sometimes lacks discretion in its use.

Ceeily Homespun is the best character in the play, and one of the most natural in any modern comedy. It was charmingly performed by Mrs. BLAKE, who, in this part and in Coueslip, gives as true and as beautiful delineations of rustic simplicity as have ever been seen on our stage. As usual, she assisted in both pieces last evening, and in both was excellent. Caroline. though in perfect contrast to Cecily, was equally well played by this invaluable actress. She was particularly admired in her assumed character. and the mock bravura was acted and sung in the finest style imaginable. Mrs. BLAKE is remarkable for the taste and propriety with which she always dresses; or my skill in such matters is even loss than I thought it. Miss WARING, in the comedy, was almost too youthful for the part she played; but this is a defect which, probably, she is not very anxious to mend. performance of Miss Dormer was creditable; but how much better would it have been, had she taken more care that the audience should hear the dialogue. The ballet was a delightful entertainment in itself, and gave the principal dancers a fair opportunity for display. It was received with unmeasured applause. COLLEY CIBBER.

SWAIM'S PAN'ACEA. To the Editor of the American Deily Advertiser. Sir, -- Enclosed you have a letter, a deposition, and certificate entitled to the highest consideration. It such detail as is here sworn to by the unhappy sufferer her-self and certified to be treated of their sufficients.

detail as is here sworn to by the unhappy sufferer her-self and certified to be true, us of their own knowledge, by two most respectable Physicians, and by the Magistrate, before whom the deposition was made, then do I aver that those who resist such evidence would not believe even though the miraculous cure should be performed under their own eyes. This case has made a deep and lasting impression on the neighbournoud where Mrs. Applegate lives, and I do not at all doubt but it will leave an impression little leave durable whereas it shall have an impression little leave durable whereas it shall Applegate lives, and I do not at all doubt but it will leave an impression little less durable wherever it shall be read. I ask, and am asked by others, with such wonderful cures sustained by the most unimpeachable testimony, why is not Swaim's Panacea prescribed by more of our segular Physicians? They know well the cases in which it would surely be efficacious. If it were not for the high respect I have for the Medical Profession, I would not besitate to impute their conduct to jealousy or enzy, or to some equally unamiable quality. I ask from the public for the following statement, deposition and certificate, a candid and impartial hearing. I ask no more, because I know no more are necessarry to carry conviction to the mind of the most prejudiced.

A NEIGHBOUR.

CRANBERRY, MIDDLESEX COURTY, N. J.)

Mr. William Steam, Philadelphia,
Sir,—Being for a few days at this place, and having heard actonishing accounts of the cure of Mrs. Sarah Applegate, of a disease which had baffled the skill of the best physicians, for seven years, I determined to call and be convinced if it were strictly true. I found her enjoying good health, which she assured me had been the case for the last three years from the result of the enjoying good health, which she assured me had been the case for the last three years—from the time she had been cured by the use of SWAIM'S PANACEA.

The horrid ravages made by the disease, are of course visible, and the lower extremities present an appearance which beggars description, that disease in any form could make such inroads on the human system without producing Death, is as astonishing as it is wonderful. She informs me that in June, 1818, a tumour formed immediately below the knee, which was extremely painful, the uneasiness and swelling of it caused her so much alarm, that she applied to a medical gentleman for relief. The tumor opened, and was succeeded by many others, until the whole limb was covered with large corroding ulcers. Medical skill was entirely unavailing to check the progress of the disease, and the patient was reduced to a most deplorable condition, the flesh seemed to be separated from the bones—the immense discharge from so many alcers, completely prostrated the patient's stængth, ther appetite was gone, and nature nearly exhausted.

In this state of misery Mrs. Applegate passed under

In this state of misery Mrs. Applegate passed under the hands of several skilful Physicians, without experience of several section of several years.

To give you a just idea of her audierings, as gathered from her own candid and artless description, I confess my utter inability. She lingered on, sometimes able to take a little exercise in a carriage, and then again unable to leave her hed for several successive mouths, until about five years after she was first attacked with disease, when as she was riding the horses ran away, over-ease, when as she was riding the horses ran away, overturned the carriage, threw her out, and caused a compound fracture of the hip. Under this accumulation of misery and suffering, she lingered too years. Her bones and integuments were laid bare, large pieces of the remaining firsh she had were constantly sloughing out, and her situation was wretched and pitiable beyond comparison, cheered by no ray of hope, doomed to wear away a miserable existence, and hourly wishing for death. She was told by some of her friends that SWAIM'S PANACEA would, if any thing could, relieve her. Mrs. Applegate consented to remove, and did remove to Philadelphia; this removal was with difficulty accomplished, and she remained, as you may recollect, under your care for about two weeks. Being at the end of that time convalescent, she returned home.—

It is impossible to express the astonishment created by her return, in the minds of all who had seen her during the even years of her sufferings. She was soon, to ge-the return, in the minus of all who had seen her during the seven years of her sufferings. She was soon, to general admiration, restored to perfect health.

Thus, Sir, by the use of your Panacea, which is acknowleded to be one of the richest gifts bestowed on suffering humanity—this unfortunate woman was restored to health and usefulness. Three years have clapsed since that they she has become the to health and usefulness. Three years have clapsed since Mrs. A. was cured; since that time she has become the happy mother of a daughter, and a finer or healthier infant I never beheld. This lact, while it is a convincing proof of the efficacy of your medicine in removing affections that originate from impurity of the blood, is equally convincing that it regenerates and invigorates all the vital principles and functions of humanity.

This case should be published—it is your interest to publish it, and it is for the benefit of the whole human family, that such astonishing and well authenticated facts be made known—although, perhaps, to those who are already acquainted with the virtues of SWAIM'S PANACEA, it may not be necessary—yet believe me, there are yet numbers entirely ignorant of its many virtues, and powerful restorative properties, who are laboring under all the horrors of disease, that for the benefit alone such cases should be made as public as possible.

ble. With sentiments of esteem, I remain, respectfully, WILLIAM B. HAMILTON.

Personally appeared before me, Robert M'Chesney, one of the Justices of the Peace for the County of Middlesex, in the

In Canton, it is the custom for kindred of dif In Canton, it is the custom for kindred of dif-ferent names to associate themselves, and live tegether in clans. The larger clans presume on the numerical strength, and seize the best lands and the most useful streams. They insult both the men and women of the smaller clans whenever they go in or out. Extreme cases occur, in which the two clans commence a sort of prirate warfare, and kill numbers on both sides.

In Canton, too, a great many dikes have been raised on the banks of the rivers, to take in shallows, and convert them to the purposes of agriculture. There is a class of country sharpers, called sand swindlers, who connect themselves with government clerks, raise litigations on false pretences and false depositions, by which means they get the produce of new lands during the whole term of litigation, which last sometimes for tens or scores of years. They have been known to cut down the real owner's grain by force, and possess themselves of it.

From what we can infer by perusing the reeard of their transactions, we are heartily sic of the detail of misrule and despotism, as exhi-bited in the government of Canton. Extortion of disallowed fees by violence, it is stated, is what all strangers are subject to, who land or embark at Macao. And not only strangers, but also resident senior commercial agents, of the first respectability, are not exempt from rude aggression and insult, by coolies and the lowest

-house retainers. One of the Princes accused the officers of the Criminal Board of a cruel and unjust infliction of torture. The prisoner was kept kneeling on chains, and otherwise tortured, for the space of a whole month. .

The Governor of Pekin apprehended one of the clerks of the Board of Revenue, who, with his accomplices, had forged an official edict, and endeavored to employ it to extort money.

To forge an imperial edict is, by law in China, death by decapitation. To forge the commands of the Empress or heir-apparent, is death by strangling. To forge the orders of Governors, Magistrates, &c. is punished by a hundred blows, or transportation for three years or less, accor-ling to the rank of the officer whose orders were forged, on the principle that the orders of infe-rior officers, if forged, can do less mischief than those of superiors.

The Court Circular from the Governor General's office of Canton announces daily the act o putting an official stamp on forms of prayer, pale, as substitutes for silk, &c. to be pro sented with sacrifices in behalf of Government not by priests, but civilians, to the temples of ds-the god of literature; the god of the wind; the celestial and the terrestrial gods; and to Confucius. To be unfortunate in business in China is about as bed as to commit a criminal act. The laws seem to be enforced with the greatest rigor on the merchants of the Cohong who become em-barrassed. This transportation is for life, unless some general pardon occurs, which has been the case in several instances, and bankrupt Hong merchants have returned to

In China they are very numerous; many of them may be seen in the suburbs of Canton-the Oil Merchants Hall, Apothecaries' Hall, Peking Fruit mer-chants' Hall, &c. At these halls the whole trade meets to deliberate on questions of general interest. The absentees are fined. All the members subscribe so much for the public expenses of the half, and to conduct legal proceedings, when they are necessary. The incorporated Company of Merchants licensed exclusively to carry on foreign commerce, commonly called Hong merchants, have also their Ooykoon, or Kungso. In the great fire of Canton, 1822, it was burned down, and has never yet been rebuilt, because the Hong merchants are desirous of finding a more lucky site for their hall. PHILADELPHIA:

MONDAY EVENING, FEB. 9, 1829.

The Boston Daily ADVERTISER, of Friday, contains the following annunciation: -" To-morrow morning, will be published, at this office, and at the principal bookstores in town, "Correspondence between John Quincy Adams, Esq. President of the United States, and several Citizens of Massachusetts, concerning the charge of a Design to Dissolve the Union, alleged to have existed in that state."-This correspondence forms a pamphlet of eighty pages, and it is published by authority of the gentlemen who addressed Mr. Adams on the subject of his Oct. 21.

The Committee of the House of Representatives on the DISTRICT of COLUMBIA, in their report on the resolutions respecting SLAVERY in that district, make the following observations on the nature of the exclusive jurisdiction of CONGRESS within its limits:-" It is true, by virtue of the Constitution, Congress is vested with exclusive power of legislation over the District of Columbia; but it is equally true that the rights of property were secured to the citizens by the laws and Constitutions of Virginia and Marvland, which deserve at least to be respected, if not held sacred, by the Legislature of the Union. Although, technically speaking, exclusive legislation may carry with it the whole legislation, over any subject, yet, in the present case, it is presumed rather to refer to the legislative action of any other body, within or without the District of Columbia, and certainly does not confer any more or greater power than is consistent with the general principles of the Constitution of the United States. It is not, therefore, to be used in an unlimited sense, as a despotic power, without reference to the Constitutional imitations. For example, Congress has exclusive legislation over all places ceded by the States for forts, magazines, arsenals, dock-yards, &c.; yet no one ern suppose, for a moment, that it was within the contemplation of the framers of the Constitution, nor is it within the spirit of the instrument, to vest Congress with the power of prescribing rules by which property may be held, or the manner of its descen different from that existing in the respective States. Still, the jurisdiction is as exclusive in the one case as in the other, and the mere force of power would authorize it to the same extent. The Committee do not mean to say that Congress cannot change the rights of persons and of things within the District, different from what they were prior to the cession .-But they mean to say, these cannot be abridged for taken away, independent of the consent of the People, without doing violence to the Constitution. Whenever Congress legislates, it should be beneficially, and not destructively, upon those rights. Its character, in this respect, is two-fold The one general, as a Legislature for the Union he other local, for the People of this District. If, in the latter, it can undertake to change the whole relations of society, constituted, as it is, with Representatives from every part of the U. States except the District of Columbia, in opposition to their will, the Constitution has done little more than erected, within the heart of the Republic, a form of government worse, if possible, than despotism itself. Two volumes of the earlier prems of Mrs. HEMANS have been published at Boston, under the superintendence of Professor NORTON, of CAMBRIDGE, by whom the profits of the edition are to be remitted to Mrs. HEMANS. The pieces contained in these volumes are now collected for the first time. and some are said to have been never before published. Mrs. HEMANS, it appears, derived little or no benefit from the previous publications undertaken by Mr. Norton vith the same view, as their sale was materially impeded by cheaper editions which immediately followed them. Should a similar attempt be now made, it is to be hoped that the numerous admirers of this lady's genius will not suffer a difference in price.

which they cannot but wish success. A distinguished ENGLISH Judge, now on the bench gives this picture of the mode of life which was for many years his own. "For the present law has become to its professors what the own reckoning, always under a stress of sail, sea. The interminable accumulation of the materials of law, prospectively,-an accumulation beyond the natural strength of man to keep pace with,-added to the unavoidable defection of the memory, retrorpectively, places, the chamber lawyer in the condition of a horse who is carrying beyond his weight. He, consequent- from being almost literally what Johnson ly, feels every other pursuit a snare, from the seguard. In such a state of things, nothing but a Goldsmith's beloved Auburn. The male popu-time, at rising, going to bed, and during meals;" or of considerably reducing the natural quantum of sleep, can prevent his sinking in the general scale of being, and diversity of thought and information. Mr. Butler is a splendid instance of exception: but how few have been trained to personal discipline in the same school, or would be willing to purchase even Mr. Butler's erudition, at the same price! I believe it may also be said, that Mr. Butler is a solitary exception." One or two of the Barons of the Excussion

Excurgura lately refused to accept promotion to the court of King's Bench. The MORNING

HERALD remarks that this is not to be wondered at, and proceeds to compare the duties of the two stations, in which the salaries are equal. A

Judge of the King's Bench is considered to be sufficiently compensated by a salary of 5,5001. a year for the performance of duties which keep him in Court from seven to eight hours a day, and sometimes more, during Term, besides giving similar attendance, under the King's warrant, for some weeks after the end of the Term-not to say any thing of the judicial functions which he performs at chambers; while a Baron of the Exchequer is paid as much by the country for enjoying a sort of "learned leisure" that lasts the greater part of the year-his Term being, for the most part, eacation-and the longest day of business being usually a half-holiday. It is, indeed, very common for the Court of Exchequer to sit at ten o'clock and rise at half past ten. When the business lasts until eleven, it is a laborious morning, and, should the Court not rise before noon, the tide of litigation must run unusually high in that part of Westminster Hall. While such is the state of business in this Court. business accumulates in the Courts of Chancery publication in the National Intelligencer, of and King's Bench, and, with all the despatch used in the latter, where a Chief Justice presides whose intelligence and quickness, in the decision of both arguments and causes, perhaps, never been surpassed, were is always a con-siderable quantity of life ion in arrear. One great cause of the unequal condition of business in the Court's of Kings Bench and Exchequer is, that the latter is a close Court. The practice there is the monoply of some few attorneys, no other attorney can bring or defend an action but in the name of one of these "Clerks in Court," but the public, not having any great confidence in this monopoly, do not choose to patronize it very liberally; and hence it has become a place where four Judges, with salaries amounting altogether to above 24,000l. a year, may, in course of time, " learn to forget law." On Wednesday, for instance, while the Court of King's Bench was occupied by a trial at Bar, which is likely to consume several long days, to the great delay of the regular business of the Term, three Barons came into the Court of Exchequer at the usual honr; the officers were all in their places, the tubman was, like Diogenes, in his tub, and one other gentleman with wig was in the row of benches adjoining the tub. Mr. Baron Garrow, taking his sout, asked if there were any other motion-meaning, perhaps, that his movement into Court was one motion. The tubman and his brother barrister near him bowed, the two other Barons smiled. and-exeunt omnes. Now, it is not seemly that a Court of Law, which costs the public so much, should be in this state of almost desue--let that unjust and most injurious monopoly be done away with. The evil has been long enough apparent-reform is wanted. The Court must be made an open one, or the public will ask " why it costs so much?"

> The NATIONAL INTELLIGENCER, of Saturday, says that the health of Mr. WIRT, the Attorney General, is entirely restored, and adds:-"At no period of his late confinement was Mr. Wirt seriously indisposed. The effects of close attention to his professional duties, during a long session of the Circuit Court in Baltimore, followed by his arduous labors of preparation for the business of the Supreme Court, had produced great debility in him, and imposed upon him a temporary suspension of attendance at the Court. He is now rapidly acquiring strength, and he will in a few days resume his station, and enter on the full performance of his duties. The anxious solicitude of the many friends of this distinguished gentleman here, and throughout the United States, has induced us to communicate these facts to the public."

Not less than two thousand persons are said o be regularly employed in the manufacture of straw hats at ORKNEY, finding a ready market at GLASGOW and EDINBURGH. The proprietor of an extensive district in AYGLESHIRE, about two years since, desirous of improving the condition of his tenantry, thought that the introduction of such an occupation would not only afford a profitable employment to the young, but produce most beneficial effects by leading them from an idle life to one of industry, cleanliness, and order. The success of his project, pursued with liberality and perseverance, is thus noticed in a late Greenock paper. "The scheme has already far surpassed the expectations of its benevolent projector. Managers were provided, the villagers set to work, and orders keep pouring in on the little colony faster than they can be executed. Above fifty females which cannot be great, to defeat a design to are now happily engaged in preparing the substratum of gentlemen's silk hats, and plaiting the more ambitious structures of ladies' bonnets. Men are employed to dress and finish the hats, but their number is of course comparatively small, though there is every prospect of the establishment being speedily doubled. Each of law of Moses, under the multitude of its glosses, the girls earns from five to six pounds per annum; was to the Israelites,-" a burden which neither and when there are two or three in a family, or they nor their fathers were able to bear." It is even when there is but one, we need scarcely scarcely possible to conceive of the anxiety, the say how much these earnings tell upon the scanoppressiveness, the burdensomeness of the life of ty income of the peasant. Mr. Southey reckons that Wesley did more good among the colliers of Newcastle than in any other scene of his spiritual exertions; and perhaps philanthropy could not find a more favourable location than amidst the homes and families of miners. But the attention of the proprietor of Strontian has not been confined to the lemporal wants and comforts of his dependents. Through his exertions, two churches from the Parliamentary grant, have been erected in the district, and three of the Assembly's Schools, which are now up, will in a few weeks be filled with the noisy " younkers" of the glen. These are substantial blessings-facts which speak for themselves. Nor is there in the above sketch the slightest tinge of exaggeration. Intelligent strangers passing through this lonely and rugged district, describe the scene as one infinitely more pleasing and gratifying than even the lakes and mountains they had travelled so far to visit.

WALNUT STREET THEATRE. In addition to the grand ballet of the Barber f Serille, we had, on Saturday night, two farces, Turn Out, and Family Jars. The ballet was dmirably executed, and its charms seemed as resh as when first displayed. Turn Out never fails to produce mirth. KILNER, who never ets a character go to sleep in his hands, cerainly detracts nothing from the ludicrous impaience of old Restire; though I do not think he overacts it. He is less apt to be extravagant in ction than in voice. I wish he could share his ungs with Boyle and Sefton. It would be dong service to all three, and to the public into he bargain. These two gentlemen gave us a whispering scene, at the commencement of the piece, but, whether belonging to it or not, I canot say. Each did his best not to be heard: occasionally reached my ears, and the leader of he orchestra probably sometimes detected a word. Marian was very amusing. Actresses, who cannot give the Scotch dialect, generally ubstitute a broad lisp in this part. I do not hink Mrs. BLAKE improved it by dispensing with both. Her interview with the Doctor was xcellent.

ROBERTS' Gregory was natural and effective. His raptures about Polly Smallfry were irresistible, and his Watentine was the thing itself. The verses, as he truly said, were very much to he purpose; and he wants nothing but a little practise to fit him for a writer of prize addresses. Family Jars was excellently played. If to augh be sinful, heaven help the wicked; for, as Sir David says, we were monstrous merry. Ro-BERTS was in excellent spirits, and played adnirably well in Delph-perhaps never better. He succeeded in throwing off the only fault frequently observable in him. He is sometimes too ame; and this, though infinitely less intolerable than the vulgar buffoonery of many low comedians, is a fault that he ought to correct. I have no doubt of his ability to do so. Diggory was worthy of his dad. PLACIDE has played better. When he repeats it, however I would advise him not to shake his fist in his wife's face, and to omit the threat which accompanies the action. There is more of brutality than humour in it, and, whether it be the invention of the author or the player, the audience will be glad to dispense with it. KILNER's Porcelaine was a good piece of ware. I doubt whether a single customer wished to see another n his place at the counter.

We are indebted to the editors of the BALTIMORE AMERICAN for the following intelligence from Buenos Ayres, received by he CELENO, Captain FRAZIER.

BUENOS AYRES, Dec. 6th 1828. A change has taken place in the Governmen of this province through the ostensible agency of a division of the army lately returned from active operations in the Brazilian territory The particulars have been so fully detailed in a pe iodical of the city, El Tiempo, that we could not perhaps better satisfy the curiosity of a great portion of our readers than by giving a ranslated copy from that journal. It is as fol-

The Government learned on the night of the 30th to the 1st, that early on the morning of the 1st a movement would be made by the ision of the army, and in consequence, about 3 o'clock in the morning of the 1st an aid-decamp was despatched from the Government to General Don Juan Lavalle, who was at the lead of the troops in the Recoleta barracks, de iring his attendance. This officer answered that he would go directly, but that it would be for the purpose of displacing a Government from a post it was unworthy of occupying; in fact he narched at dawn of day to the Plaza de la Vic oria with the fifth regiment of infantry unde the command of Colonel Olazabalz, whilst a pary of the lancers commanded by Col. Olavaria, and the regiment of Cazadores of Col. Correa's took possession of the Park of Artillery and other important posts.

"At half past 4 in the morning a part of the ancers entered the Plaza with General Lavalle and Colonel Olavaria, and several other officers t their head; a few minutes afterwards Col. Corea with his regiment came to the Plaza. The 4th regiment of Cazadores and the Light Artilley, with Cols. Rolon and Iriarte, had in the mean me got into the Fort, in which were the Minisers Guido and Balcarce, (the Governor Dorrego aving fled at 4 o'clock in the morning:) the laced two cannons on the bastion, and two or hree small pieces of cannon at the gateway, a he same time closing the entrance to the Fort. " Public tranquillity had not been in the least disturbed; the citizens came to the Plaza, and very soon the: was a considerable assemblage the most distinguished people of Buenos yres, who offered, (if necessary,) to take up

"This state of things remained until 7 o'clock in the morning, when Gen. Don Henrique Martinez came out of the Fort, upon a commission Gen. Lavalle; from him it was learned that Dorrego had gone off at the hour aforesaid, ithout having delegated any one to command; consequently, from 4 in the morning there was no government in Buenos Ayres, as the Minisers had no authority whatever.

Gen. LAVALLE then issued a proclamation announcing that the government had fallen after all legal measures had been tried to correct its errors; and calling on the people to assemble, the same day, (Dec. 1.) to deliberate. The people met, in immense numbers, and elected LAVALLE Provisionhabit which few men acquire of bringing into lation of Strontian are chiefly employed in culti- al Governor. The general officers published an address. dated, Dec, 6, 1828, enumerating the abuses which had made the change of government necessary. It is signed by Felix Olazabal, Isaac Thompson, Juan Perderneva, Manuel Correa, Pedro J. Diaz, Jose Olavaria, Sixto Quesada, Ancleto Vega, Juan Apostolo Martinez.

A decree of General Lavalle, provisional Governor of the Province, dated 6th December, appointed Admiral Brown to the command of the civil and military government of the Province during his (Lavalle's) absence in the country.

In the afternoon of 10th December, a bulletin was published containing a hasty despatch from General Lavalle to the Delegate Governor, (Admiral Brown,) announcing the defeat of Col. Dorrego's force on the 9th inst.: and some fur ther observations from an individual who was in the battle, that Dorrego and Rosas fled upon the same horses which they had rode in the action. were closely pursued, &c.

On the 11th, was published the official detail of the above action, in a communication from General Lavalle to the Minister J. M. Diaz Velez dated Navarro December 10, 1828.

The despatch concludes by stating that as not more than thirty of the fugitives are united in any part, it is not the intention to move the cavalry from Navarro; but that if any of the disciples of Artigas should make their appearance, they will be quickly punished, as the cavalry will not for the future encounter the obstacle for the want of horses, which has retarded the operations just concluded.

The delegate Governor has received an official despatch that Col. Don Manual Dorrego has though, in spite of their caution, a sort of buz fallen into the power of one of the pursuing parties of Senor General Lavalle .- Gaceta Mercan tile, Dec. 13.

The bill protecting the Fair Mount water works at Philadelphia, has passed the house of representatives, and been sent to the senate for currence. It underwent a warm discussion and was advocated by Messrs. Boyd, Bonsall, Hassinger, and the other members of the city .-Mesers. Martin, Snyder, Blair, and others opposed it. It appeared in the course of the de-bate, that these valuable works cost the city one a three hundred thousand dollars. Mosses Cunningham, Evans of Fayette, Krepps, Pat-Washington, and Wilkins, who had terson of Washington, and Wilkins, who had lately visited the city, spoke in the highest terms of the present state of the works.—Harrisburg may be inferred from the success they have met with in many parts of Europe.

As the same causes exist here, which, in the old country destroy the human teeth, it may not be ansist to make an attempt to disseminate information on a subject of such universal importance, had it been taken up by any other person, the public would not now experience this intrusion upon their patience."

Page 33.—"Some persons as if fearful that the Dentists may not have sufficient employment, endeavour to encourage inattention to the teeth. Instead of acknowledging that disease arises from external means, they impute its origin to internal causes, when, in almost every instance, disease is the inevitable consequence of neglect." The Boston writer proceeds here at great length, proving the importance of timely stopping disease in the teeth, which naturally increases if left to fisself, the same as in every other part of the human frame.
